

Commissioners,

As a holder of a vanity callsign, I am greatly appreciative of the vanity callsign program which is in place. However I feel that the tendency of some to submit multiple applications for the same callsign is an abuse to the system and definitely not in the spirit of the amateur radio either as a hobby or as a public service.

Accepting multiple applications from one applicant for one call limits the access to the available callsigns to those individuals who have sufficient funds.

I feel it would be in the best interests of the FCC to limit the number of applications as it would also reduce the workload and accounting expense required to process applications and to refund fees for unsuccessful applications.

Again, I am appreciative of the vanity callsign program and the privilege of using it.

Respectfully,
Michael Heebink - W9MH
